To 2. Our original recommendation had its origin in terms of the  charter and the use of its economic action projects. That may be narrower than a study in depth of all economic programs (both "warfare" and "action" activities, to the extent there is a difference). Scott's memorandum should not be interpreted to mean that we have any objection to such a broadened review. It may well be useful to the CS to undertake it for the purpose of developing a basic policy and set of guidelines. He is merely saying that our recommendation was not intended to be this broad.
